

ASHES OF BRINKWOOD

Brinkwood happens to be one of the many towns within the Kingdom of Eldoria. Located south-west of the main capital, Brinkwood is a lively town that welcomes all into its land.

Although over many years there have been strange reports coming from Brinkwood and one of which is the disappearance of children during a festival.

Brinkwood often holds a festival each year of the royal calendar to celebrate the town yearly harvest and prosperity, people from far often come the witness the joy and festivity the event brings. But every year there is always a report of missing children, action and investigation measures has been taken but no lead was found.

The Eldorian Knights declared it as basic kidnapping as big festivals can often attract slave merchants, they also took multiple precautions like setting up guards and patrol but still they found nothing. This undoubtedly reduced the number of missing children but the event still occurred.

The festival was placed on hold for five years for further investigation but still they found nothing. After five years the festival was finally going to be held once more and everyone was looking forward to it.

An anonymous request was placed for an adventurer to pose as a civilian and investigate on the matter concerning the disappearance of children that attend the festival although this isn't the first time this particular request was sent to the guild, anytime such request was answered it usually result in nothing being found of the disappearance of the summoned adventurer which in on itself is suspicious.

Now another request has been sent hinting again that the people of the village at least those in control could be the reasons of the disappearance of these children, as unrealistic as it sounds and thus without evidence, it's better than having nothing to work with.

You have been called to look into the matter at hand and travel to Brinkwood and investigate before the five-day festival ends.
